ARE YOU READY?

Today we'll learn about the seasons: what they are, which ones they are and how to talk about them in a conversation.

GRAMMAR

When we talk about the seasons...

We can use past continuous, past simple, present continuous, present simple, and we talk about things that happened, could or will happen (plans, memories etc).

For example:

Last spring I was looking to buy a house.

On winter I played hockey with my friends.

The trees are withering fast this fall.

She works until summer.

We can use the seasons to describe something as well, normally by comparing:

She is like a winter's day

During fall or autumn:

Plants and leaves from the trees start to change colors and fall.

A study shows that people born in autumn live longer.

Night and day are the same length.

Autumn is also associated with the beginning of the school season, holidays like Halloween and thanksgiving.

WINTER

During winter/wintertime:

Christmas takes place.

It's the coldest season.

Animals migrate and/or hibernate.

Snow activities like skiing and sledding take place.

It can symbolize the absence of hope, due to its cold nature but also the coziness and the warmth of the holiday.
